Dear Sir,

Abduction of 31 school children from Embilipitiya cluster of schools.

EXPRES
“…Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit…”

_Cassius in Julius Caesar, Act I, Scene III_

(Quoted by S. H. C. de Silva, Secretary to the EDSCPO, in letters written by him about the abduction, torture and enforced disappearance of his son and other schoolchildren in Embilipitiya between August 1989 and January 1990.)
The names of a majority of the disappeared schoolchildren from Embilipitiya are listed below in order to centre them in this document. This list is drawn from existing lists in the collection. However, according to the case details compiled by the Commission of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal or Disappearance of Persons in the Western, Southern and Sabaragamuwa Provinces (1994), the number of disappeared—comprising both schoolchildren and men—is higher. As noted in the first section of this finding aid, the lists in the collection specifically focus on the disappeared children of parents involved as members of the EDSCPO.

Apart from the circumstances leading up to their disappearance, very little is known about the schoolchildren since their individual biographies have not been recorded in detail.

1. HISTORICAL, ADMINISTRATIVE, BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

1.1. A brief history of the Embilipitiya case

(Note: The following narrative is drawn from information in court records, the records in the collection, official state accounts and other publications. It is not meant to be a conclusive and/or exhaustive account of the Embilipitiya case, but rather an introduction to the context in which the records were created, received, and maintained, and to some of the key events during the parents’ decade-long struggle for justice.)

The Embilipitiya Disappeared Schoolchildren's Parents' Organisation (EDSCPO) was established by a group of affected parents following the enforced disappearance of their children, who were between the ages of 15 and 19 years. They were abducted from their homes and schools, detained without charge and many of them tortured by the 6th Artillery Regiment of the Sri Lankan Army at Sevana Army Camp in Embilipitiya. The testimony of eyewitnesses, mainly parents and other children who were abducted and then released from detention, reveals how army personnel arrived at the dead of night, forcibly entered their homes, assaulted family members and then abducted their children.

These specific abductions took place between August 1989 and January 1990. At the time, mainly in the Southern, Central, Sabaragamuwa and Western provinces, the second Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP) insurrection was faltering after more than two years of bloody violence. The JVP and military reportedly killed thousands, the former targeting politicians, military personnel, politicians, military personnel, and civilians.

1 An enforced disappearance is “…considered to be the arrest, detention, abduction or any other form of deprivation of liberty by agents of the State or by persons or groups of persons acting with the authorization, support or acquiescence of the State, followed by a refusal to acknowledge the deprivation of liberty or by concealment of the fate or whereabouts of the disappeared person, which place such a person outside the protection of the law.” Article 2, International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, OHCHR, https://www.ohchr.org/en/hrbodies/ced/pages/conventionced.aspx, <accessed June 25, 2021>

3 “In cases where the inmates were reluctant to open the doors they broke open the doors and came in. In some cases they took away the abductees by force and in that process assaulted or caused physical harm and harassment to the parents and relatives of the abductees as well. In some cases children were taken away by deceitful means telling the parents and the relatives that they were being taken away for the purpose of recording a statement.” Dayananda Lokugalappathi and Eight Others v. the State. Op. cit., p. 374; Unresolved “disappearances” in the period 1987-1990: ‘The case of Sevana Army Camp’, Amnesty International, October 1991, AI Index ASA 37/18/91, p. 3 government supporters, police and military personnel. In response, several senior JVP leaders and a significant number of the movement’s cadres were rounded up, arrested and many killed in the counter-insurgency operations of the state. The official operations, which were sanctioned by the United National Party (UNP) government, involved the police and multiple regiments of the military. As noted by the Court of Appeal in relation to the Embilipitiya case, “The Government of the day had stationed army camps all over the country with a view to crush the Southern insurgency immediately. One such camp namely Sevana camp was set up at Embilipitiya. That was a time when law and order had failed.

In addition to official military and police operations, a number of paramilitary groups—such as the ‘Black Cats’, ‘Green Tigers’, ‘Ukussa’ and the ‘PRRA’—were responsible for abductions, torture, enforced disappearances and killings. Godahewa Indradasa, a former senior state intelligence officer, confirms that political parties and vigilante groups received weapons from the Ministry of Defence—“…any group who possessed arms could take the law into their hands…Retribution was swift and brutal, and sometimes unfortunately at the cost of innocent people. The guilty simply vanished into the jungle.” Rajan Hoole notes that the death squads “…were loosely linked through a hierarchy of government politicians, military co-ordinating officers and police officers.”

In the district of Ratnapura, where Embilipitiya is located, the coordinating officer at the time of these enforced disappearances was Lieutenant Colonel Rohan Parakrama ‘Parry’ Liyanage, who had assumed command from Brigadier Lucky Algama. Liyanage served as the commander of the 6th Artillery Regiment between 1988 and 1990. It was in the above context of the second

5 “By April 1990 the total number of people killed by the JVP and by the security forces numbered over 40,000. An average of ten people died every day in the second half of 1987. The number of people killed dramatically increased to an average of twenty a day in the next ten months. From December 1988 to December 1989 an average of a hundred died every day.” Gunaratna, R. Sri Lanka, a Lost Revolution? The Inside Story of the JVP. Kandy, Sri Lanka: Institute of Fundamental Studies, 1990, p. 269
6 C. A. Chandraprema “…claims that 40,000 people have lost their lives in these three years. According to him 8,000 were killed by the security forces from August 1987 to July 1989, and 15,000 from August 1989 to January 1990. He also records the JVP to have taken the lives of 17,000 people.” Ibid.

10 In 1987, the Military Intelligence (Artillery Field Regiment) and the Special Task Force (STF) were created as the official operations, which were sanctioned by the United National Party (UNP) government, involved the police and multiple regiments of the military. As noted by the Court of Appeal in relation to the Embilipitiya case, “The Government of the day had stationed army camps all over the country with a view to crush the Southern insurgency immediately. insurrection that army personnel attached to the Regiment carried out investigations and detained individuals for interrogation.

*Correspondence, October 30, 1992,
S. H. C. de Silva et al. to G. P. S. De Silva, Chief Justice
ESCI/CPD/N/1992/44*

Embilipitiya was identified by security forces as an area of JVP activity. In mid-August 1989, four police constables were killed in a landmine explosion in Embilipitiya. The Commission of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal or Disappearance of Persons in the Western, Southern and Sabaragamuwa Provinces (hereinafter referred to as the Commission of Inquiry) noted that “Embilipitiya was one of the areas worst-affected by subversive activities. The Embilipitiya Paper Mill was burnt and several incidents of damage to public property have also been reported.”

There was also the issue of the student-led protests across a few schools. This included initial protests against the proposed reclamation of around 60 perches of the school grounds at Embilipitiya Central College to build a petrol station. There were also protests by students against the Principal of Embilipitiya Central College on the basis of allegations of corruption. According to another account, some of the other protests may have been animated by the prevailing political climate at the time: the opposition to the Indo-Lanka Accord and the alarmingly high number of disappearances of students within universities around the country. The incidence of protests at various schools was reportedly interpreted by the army to be an indication of the JVP’s presence and influence in the village; although there was no credible evidence to support this view. Those involved in organising the protests were identified by the army and thereafter viewed with suspicion.

As noted by the Commission of Inquiry, a student who left the country for university was suspected of being a key organiser and instigator of the protests. In a ploy by the authorities to capture him, three of his brothers were abducted.

The targeting of the students by the army

The families of the disappeared students still do not know the exact reasons behind the abduction and detention of their children. It is alleged that the schoolchildren were targeted after the Principal of the College, Dayananda Lokugalappaththi, provided a list of names to soldiers attached to the 6th Artillery Regiment. This list comprised schoolchildren considered by Lokugalappaththi to be ‘troublemakers’; although this was proven, as examined below, to be a personal vendetta. Lokugalappaththi developed a ‘close friendship’ with Colonel Liyanage and certain soldiers of the 6th Artillery Regiment. The parents of the schoolchildren alleged that Lokugalappaththi used his influence and proximity to the army to punish the students at his school and others within the cluster. One account about the case notes that the list comprised students who stuck out within the student body, were allegedly involved in the student protests and who were perceived to be insubordinate. As noted by the Commission of Inquiry, after Lokugalappaththi’s appointment as Principal, he…cultivated close relationships with politicians and army officers and also defrauded school funds and accepted bribes to admit children to school. Student opposition to his fraudulent activities grew in all the schools in cluster of which he was principal. To counter these protests Galappaththy backed by politicians evolved a plan to abduct and cause to disappear 7 or 8 outstanding students from each school. This was implemented with the active support of the Army personnel in the Sevana Army Camp.

There were incidents such as hooting at the principal and schoolyard brawls. Notwithstanding the fact that the schoolchildren excelled in their studies and as talented athletes, which was underscored by the Commission of Inquiry in its report on the case, their challenge to traditional figures of authority, and the resulting resentment, was assumed to be one of the key reasons for their abduction and detention. Another issue was the Principal’s character and past record, which was scrutinised by the Commission of Inquiry:

> It is evident from his past record that his integrity as a school principal had been questioned several times; however, we find that the Department of Education had failed to take expeditious and proper disciplinary action on these occasions.

The Court of Appeal highlights the testimony of witnesses regarding the Principal’s conduct:

23 Dayananda Lokugalappaththi and Eight Others v. the State Op. cit., p. 405. See also pages 380, 382, 385, 388, 397 and 414 for testimony on the list.

24 “Four or five students in this class are much too cocky. It is necessary to get rid of them. It (sic.) like a cancer.” Quoted in the Final Report of the Commission of Inquiry, Vol. II. Op. cit., p. 26

25 Annual Report of the Chairman of the Human Rights Task Force, Op. cit., p. 24; “These are some of the evidence that was elicited from the prosecution witnesses at the trial which go to show not only the existence of very close relationship between the 1st accused-appellant and the army personnel of Sevena camp, but that he conspired with the men in uniform to engage in an illegal exercise of abducting the students.” Dayananda Lokugalappaththi and Eight Others v. the State. Op. cit., p. 380

27 de Silva, Jani. Op. cit., pp. 138-141; Jani de Silva notes that the list of students from Embilipitiya Central College was initially drawn up by the College’s ‘Disciplinary Committee’ and read out at the meetings of the College’s Parent-Teacher Association. See also Dayananda Lokugalappaththi and Eight Others v. the State. Op. cit., pp. 369-370.

The 1st accused-appellant had supported the student agitation which in fact paved the way for him to come as the Principal of that school. Even after his coming there as the Principal the student unrest continued which made him to arm himself with a pistol and a hand bomb as well, as deposed to by witnesses.\textsuperscript{33}

The records of the court proceedings, the report of the Commission of Inquiry and the testimony of the parents consistently underline Lokugalappaththi’s personal animosity towards the students, the threats directed against them and a clear intention to abduct them, which was, as noted above, reportedly planned as a way in which to ‘discipline’ the students.\textsuperscript{34} Lokugalappaththi even attempted to gain the support of the principals of other schools and the gramasevaka (village officer) in his nefarious plan.\textsuperscript{35} However, the principals approached by Lokugalappaththi refused to support him and became alarmed by Lokugalappaththi’s methods, particularly his consideration of extreme measures against the students.\textsuperscript{36} Amongst the \textsuperscript{35} “I have discussed a plan with Mahesh Danansuriya and Kodikara, 7 or 8 fellows will be abducted on the same day.” Quoted in Dayananda Lokugalappaththi and Eight Others v. the State. Op. cit., p. 380; See also de Silva, Jani. Op cit., pp. 139-140 disappeared were the children—students at Embilipitiya Central College—of three prominent principals in the area.37

There was also the issue of personal disputes that led to the exacting of revenge. In a few cases, the students of parents who had disputes with Lokugalappaththi were threatened and scapegoated.38 In the case of Chamara Jayasena, the Commission of Inquiry—based on testimony from his father, N. A. Jayasena, Principal of Tunkama Central College—notes,

Jayasena’s father believes that the cause for his son’s abduction and disappearance was student rivalry between his son and Chaminda Galappaththy the son of D. Galappaththy the Principal of Embilipitiya Madya Maha Vidyalaya coupled with the displeasure between himself and the said D. Galappaththy many years ago.39

In the case of Nalin Kumara Gunaratne, the Commission of Inquiry—based on the testimony of his father, S. K. Gunaratne—notes,

...Guneratne placed before this Commission as evidence of animus on the part of Galappaththy a personal animosity vs. him Guneratne (father of Nalin) for scolding Galappaththy in questioning another student at Embilipitiya M. M. V. who was found with fire crackers in this (sic.) bags in the school bus from Sevanagala Sugar Corporation to Embilipitiya had sought to obtain a confession implicating Nalin in that incident.40

The disputes and rivalries between Lokugalappaththi’s son (a student at Embilipitiya Central College) and the other schoolchildren also included the infamous love letter incident41 and, separately, a dispute at a cricket match on December 17, 1989, where Chaminda Lokugalappaththi and his friends threatened to ‘necklace’ their rivals from Udugama with tyres.42 Later, on the same day of the cricket match, three students from Udugama involved in the dispute were abducted.4344

In 1992, following investigations conducted by the Criminal Investigation Department (CID), the Government, when it reported to the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances (WGEd), confirmed that ‘personal motives’ were the reason behind the detention of the schoolchildren.45 Major General Cecil Waidyaratne, the 12th Commander of the Army, reiterated the latter in his responses to the habeas corpus applications.46 He further stated that Sevana Army

42 Final Report of the Commission of Inquiry, Vol. II. Op. cit., p. 26; Annual Report of the Chairman of the Human Rights Task Force, Op. cit. p. 24-5; ‘Necklacing’ is a reference to the brutal way in which the JVP, military and armed paramilitary groups often showcased bodies in order to instil fear within society at the time. As a method of extrajudicial killing and torture, it was used in many other contexts, such as South Africa.

Camp was not an official detention centre and that the schoolchildren were never in the custody of the army.\textsuperscript{47} However, Major General Waidyratne’s responses with regard to the latter were described as “untenable” by the Commission of Inquiry after its assessment of the extant evidence, specifically the Expenses Register maintained at the camp, which proved that witnesses to the schoolchildren’s detention were also held as detainees at the camp.\textsuperscript{48}

\textit{The principal’s list}

The court records, specifically the testimonies of witnesses, point to the existence of a list.\textsuperscript{49} One particular case is Maithri Leslie Silva’s testimony in which he describes a list provided by Lokugalappaththi with some names typed and others handwritten.\textsuperscript{50} Silva further testified that the list included his name, the names of his friends and that he noticed some names had been cut off.\textsuperscript{51} Principal Kalugampitiya’s testimony established that Lokugalappaththi had requested a list of students’ names from her school.\textsuperscript{52} Principal Kalugampitiya, however, did not comply with this request. Furthermore, the judgement of the High Court observed that the 1\textsuperscript{st} defendant (Dayana Lokugalappaththi) never denied the charge that he provided a list of names\textsuperscript{53} and that the 4\textsuperscript{th} defendant (W. J. D. Epa) did not respond to the allegation that he received a list of names from the 1\textsuperscript{st} defendant.\textsuperscript{54} In light of this, the High Court arrived at the reasonable conclusion that a list of names had been provided by the 1\textsuperscript{st} defendant to the 4\textsuperscript{th} defendant.\textsuperscript{55}

The number of disappeared schoolchildren

According to the records of the EDSCPO, 46 schoolchildren and 2 university students were abducted from their homes or schools and disappeared in the Embilipitiya area—22 schoolchildren from Embilipitiya Central College and the rest from other surrounding schools in the area, including Udagama Central College, Moraketiya College and Tunkama Central College. However, there is a discrepancy in the total number of the disappeared in the records (from 31 and 32 to 46 and 48) since the EDSCPO focussed on the detention, torture and disappearance of the children of parents active in the Organisation and who were willing to institute legal proceedings. As noted by the EDSCPO, “…a total of 48 students have been abducted from the Embilipitiya area. These 48 included two university students as well. But since only 31 parents got together to form this parents Association initially and carried out this agitation, this incident came to be popularly known as 31 student-abductions.”

On the issue of numbers, the Commission of Inquiry recorded a higher number of abductions and disappearances—a total of 53 school children within and around the Embilipitiya area. In terms of other cases, there were individuals between the ages of 20 and 49 who were forcibly disappeared. The Commission of Inquiry recorded 11 such cases of disappeared persons that were relevant to the investigation into the disappearance of the schoolchildren. In total, the Commission of Inquiry investigated and documented 64 cases of disappearances in the Embilipitiya area.\textsuperscript{60}

The correspondence, newspaper clippings, court records and other published accounts provide details about the detention and torture of the schoolchildren.\textsuperscript{61} The final judgement of the High Court of Ratnapura notes that the evidence pointed to the existence of an ‘abattoir’ at the camp—a special room allocated for the torture of detainees.\textsuperscript{62} This was, in other accounts, disturbingly called the ‘mas kadé’ (meat shop).\textsuperscript{63} For example, the Commission of Inquiry, commenting on the connection between Lokugalappaththi and the army, reproduced a statement allegedly made by him during a telephone conversation and heard by the mother of a disappeared schoolchild: “Hello Mr. Senaratne...Where did you go last night...Did you find them?...Did you take them to the ‘mas kade?’ (meat stall, meaning torture room).........I will come that way this evening”.\textsuperscript{64}

The detainees were reportedly taken to Sevana Army Camp and chained together.\textsuperscript{65} During their detention, they were interrogated and tortured.\textsuperscript{66} According to one account, this was standard practice at the camp and all detainees were put through it.\textsuperscript{67} There were three soldiers identified as the key figures managing the detainees and who were responsible for their torture: Jaliya Epa, Vajira Chamarasinghe and S. A. Senaratne.\textsuperscript{68} The torture methods reportedly involved... being stripped naked, tied to a bench, burnt with an iron rod, beaten with wooden hammers and then having one’s entire head repeatedly immersed in a bag of chillie powder.\(^{69}\) A survivor’s eyewitness statement details what he discovered when asked by the soldiers to clean the ‘mas kadé’: instruments of torture (swords, irons rods and knives) and pieces of human flesh.\(^{70}\) The eyewitness also revealed that he saw some of the schoolchildren crawling and being brought out of the room, battered and bruised, a few with infected wounds and severe head injuries, and others “lifeless”.\(^{71}\)

The disappearance of the schoolchildren

Many of the parents, terrified about what may have happened to their children, waited outside the camp gate for updates from the authorities, some even repeatedly visiting day after day over several months.\(^{72}\) In one case, a student was voluntarily produced numerous times, released to his parents for medical treatment, and then later abducted.\(^{73}\) The Commission of Inquiry makes the following observations about abductions during that time,

That “abduction” rather than “arrest” was the preferred method of operation, is a clear indication that physical elimination of the persons taken-in was not ruled out. Given, additionally the unrecorded nature of the initial abduction and detention the temptation to adopt ‘elimination’ as a practice was inevitable.\(^{74}\)

It was after the 25\(^{th}\) of January 1990 that the parents were forced to confront the very real possibility that their children would never be returned to them. According to one parent, the 6\(^{th}\) Artillery Regiment moved out of Sevana Army Camp without releasing the detained schoolchildren or notifying the parents.\(^{75}\) It was reported that the Regiment had returned to the Panagoda Cantonment, which is its regimental headquarters.\(^{76}\)

Between 1989 and 1992, the affected parents provided statements about the disappearance of their children on eight different occasions to the Police and to officials attached to the Ministry of Defence.\(^{77}\) Some of these statements were not retrievable when requested by the Commission of Inquiry, which noted in its report, “…where the complaint is against the Army, (“Security Force”) the Police did not record (sic.) the disappearance, or recorded it in general terms as having occurred at the hands of unknown persons…”\(^{78}\) At the time, some of the families of the disappeared schoolchildren felt that they would never be able secure justice given that the perpetrators were the very officials tasked with maintaining law and order.\(^{79}\) Furthermore, in October 1990 and in February 1992, representatives of the UNP government denied that the Army had taken the schoolchildren into custody and instead pointed the finger at ‘armed thugs’.80

In June 1992, Senior DIG Premadasa Udugampola, former head of the Bureau of Special Operations, who was widely feared due to his brutal reputation in the counter-insurgency operations against the JVP,81 was interviewed (referred to as the ‘Udugampola Analysis’) by Ravaya about the Embilipitiya case.82 In the interview, DIG Udugampola assigned responsibility to army soldiers leading the ‘Black Cats’ paramilitary group and to regional politicians, who, according to him, handed over ‘liquidation lists’ to the group.83 He also stated that the schoolchildren had no connection to the JVP. Perhaps the most disturbing point in Udugampola’s exposition was the allegation that three of the schoolchildren may have died during torture and, on account of this, a decision may have been made by both the army officers and the politicians...

Teak Forest and Sooriyakanda

According to a Sunday Times article published on the May 8, 1994, the evidence collected during the investigations by authorities revealed that the children may have been killed and their remains burnt at a place called ‘Teak Forest’, along the UdaWalawe–Tanamalwila Road and 24 kilometres from Embilipitiya.

The article quotes Tilak Marapana (Attorney-General between 1992 and 1994), who further stated that the “…the Sooriyakanda finds have no connection to the Embilipitiya student killings…”

Sooriyakanda, roughly 46 kilometres from Embilipitiya, was the site of a mass grave discovered in January 1994.

An exact count of the number of bodies was never confirmed, but it was estimated to be over 300.

At the time, there was speculation that the schoolchildren from Embilipitiya may have been buried at the site along with the remains of other children killed within the district during that period. However, this was never proven since forensic investigations halted after a few years.

In reference to Sooriyakanda, Justice J. F. A. Soza made the following comments, “…there is no acceptable proof that the bones are the remains of the 32 missing schoolboys. The place of burial of the schoolboys is rumoured to be Tekke Kele (Teak jungle) which is very much closer to the Sevana Camp where the schoolboys were detained than Sooriyakanda.”

The above is a statement issued to Sunday Times of 8-5-1994, by the former Attorney-General in Embilipitiya, student abductions and the subsequent killings. According to him he knows who abducted our children. He also knows that they are missing, he also knows that they were taken to a place called the Teek Forest where they had been killed and burnt, but the most surprising thing he does not know is who killed them. According to him the abductors are known locally, these abductors were properly questioned, could not have not been known who killed them? This harrowing massacre of school boys took place inside the Teek Forest which is situated about 15 miles away from Embilipitiya, along the Hela Hela - Welawa Road, on 26th January 1990.

Dear Sir,

Further to our earlier representatives and statements which you were good enough to investigate, we have after our own inquiries found evidence which could show that our school boys or some of them were in fact killed and burnt at a site we are able to point out.

We have witnesses who will testify to the fact of seeing the soldiers from the Sevana Camp burning the dead bodies of some young school boys and burning them at the site using some tyres they had brought along with them. He had seen 42 such bodies being disposed of in this manner.

We have not seen this particular site but we can point it out. We are certain that this piece of evidence will be useful if the Government Analyst and the Judicial Medical Officer could also be requested to assist in identifying the remnants of the burnt bodies that are at this site.

Legal proceedings begin in 1992

The EDSCPO received advice from a number of local and international authorities on its legal recourse, which included the HRTF’s recommendation to immediately institute legal proceedings against the perpetrators.92 The WGEID made the following comments about the case in October 1992,

In 1992, the Human Rights Task Force conducted an investigation into this case. Subsequent to the investigation, the principal and seven members of the army, including one high-ranking official, were identified as those allegedly responsible. None of them has been brought to trial, arrested, held as suspect or questioned. The Working Group was told by the Government that as a matter of strategy in the case, the principal had not been arrested in order to question the high-ranking military officer first. The officer, however, had not been arrested or even questioned because he had been sent to the conflict in north…The principal, though briefly removed from his post on charges of accepting bribes, is now reinstated and is said to be in line for promotion.93

20 parents initiated legal proceedings by filing habeas corpus applications, which were taken up at the Magistrate’s Court in 1992. The Commission of Inquiry notes that applications were filed in the Court of Appeal and that the latter “directed the Chief Magistrate, Colombo, to record evidence and come to a finding in respect of all these Applications.”94 The final report of the Commission of Inquiry also lists the findings of the Magistrate wherein the responsibility of the respondents in relation to the applications was decided.9596

In 1994, based on the strength of evidence collected, the Attorney-General filed indictments against nine accused persons under the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979 (as amended) at the High Court of Ratnapura (121/94).97 The nine persons accused included Dayananda Lokugalappathi, Chaminda Lokugalappathi, Lieutenant Colonel Rohan Liyanage and six soldiers attached to the Sixth Artillery Regiment.98 The charges, a total of eighty, ranged from the “wrongful confinement of a named person for a period exceeding 10 days” to the “conspiracy to abet the abduction of a person in order that he may be murdered or be put in 96 In a letter to the EDSCPO, Justice Soza of the HRTF notes the following: “When the sixteen cases are called in court you could appoint one lawyer for all the cases. The next step would be to argue the cases at the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal will order the cases to be inquired into by the Magistrate of Embilipitiya. The Magistrate of Embilipitiya will record all the available evidence and submit his report to the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal will then make its order on the basis of what the magistrate has reported and any submissions made during the argument.” Correspondence, February 12, 1993, ESC1/CPD/N/1993/192, Records of the Secretary (S. danger of being murdered.”\textsuperscript{99} As the \textit{Commission of Inquiry} notes, “the charges are framed variously in terms of conspiracy to abet and in terms of acting with a common intention.”\textsuperscript{100}

A major factor in the institution of legal proceedings was the direction issued by the \textit{Human Rights Task Force} (HRTF)—headed by Justice J. F. A. Soza—to the CID, which was credited as a factor in the commencement of investigations.\textsuperscript{101} The HRTF’s subsequent reports were critical of the lack of action. In September 1993, Justice Soza made the following comment regarding the case:

> Still no action. The Police have recorded statements and prepared their dossier in the case. The dossier has been sent to the Attorney-General who is said to be considering it. This is a case where eye witnesses are available—the parents who saw the children being taken at different times and two persons who had been taken along with some of the schoolboys and detained some days at the Sevana Camp and later released. The boys are missing, there are witnesses who identified the men who took them and there are two witnesses who were detained along with the schoolboys at the Sevana Camp who identified the persons responsible for the taking and the detention. This evidence in my view is cogent enough for a case to be filed. The habeas corpus cases filed by the parents will be aborted when the respondents say they do not have the boys. The habeas corpus cases cannot absolve the state from responsibility.

The witnesses included parents who were abducted, detained and later released. The HRTF noted that these parents are “…eye-witnesses to the arrest and detention” of the schoolchildren.\textsuperscript{102} One particular case was K. K. D. Aloysius’s father, K. K. D. Stephen, who was detained at Sevana Army Camp at the same time as his son.\textsuperscript{103} The \textit{Commission of Inquiry} notes, “A Special feature of this case is Stephen’s allegation that the Food Register of Sevena Army Camp contains K. K. D. Aloysius’s name and that the officials used to get Stephen to sign against Aloysius’s name right until Stephen was released on 01.01.90 along with 30 other detainees.”\textsuperscript{104}

There were other schoolchildren who were detained and released after agreeing to sign a confession.\textsuperscript{105} Despite being warned not to divulge any information by the camp authorities, many of these children courageously came forward a few years later as witnesses and gave testimony during the legal proceedings.\textsuperscript{106}

Equally important were the reports and resulting pressure exerted by \textit{Amnesty International}, the \textit{United Nations Commission on Human Rights} and the WGEID.\textsuperscript{107} The HRTF’s own investigation and report were critical in pushing for accountability. As the \textit{Commission of Inquiry} notes, “…only the HRTE \textit{(sic.)} had recorded a statement regarding the incident. Even then up to now the parents have had no intimation from any source, official or otherwise, state or non-state, as to the fate that may have befallen their children.”

Some of the parents of the other disappeared schoolchildren decided not to pursue legal action. One reason highlighted was that they could not afford the legal fees, and the other was that they feared the same fate would befall the other members of their family: “We thought it better to save at least the others in the family.”

The Court found that there was an intention to murder or dispose of the abductees. Furthermore, the prosecution, through circumstantial evidence, was able to establish that the abductees had been tortured and thereafter disposed. To date, the exact fate of all the disappeared schoolchildren and men is still unknown.

Convictions and appeals

On February 10, 1999, seven out of the nine accused were convicted by the High Court of Ratnapura and sentenced to five and ten years of rigorous imprisonment (the sentences ran concurrently). Lieutenant Colonel Rohan Liyanage and Chaminda Lokugalappaththi were acquitted due to a lack of evidence implicating them in the specific charges. According to a news report, no charges of murder were brought forward since the bodies of the schoolchildren were never located.

On January 4, 2002, an appeal by the seven accused was dismissed (with variations resulting in previous convictions and sentences for specific counts being set aside) for six of the accused-appellants by Justices P. H. K. Kulatilaka and R. Fernando in the Court of Appeal. The seventh accused-appellant—E. J. Kumarasinghe—was acquitted of all charges after consideration of the evidence, the observations of the trial judge and the submissions of the senior counsel representing the accused.¹²⁰

A year later, at the Supreme Court, a bench comprising Chief Justice Sarath Silva, Justice Asoka de Silva and Justice T. B. Weerasuriya dismissed a subsequent appeal by the six accused and upheld the convictions on February 14, 2003.¹²¹ However, the Court directed that the period during which the accused “were in custody should be taken into account as having served as part of the sentence.”¹²²

Establishing the truth, and demanding measures of redress

Over thirty years later, many of the affected families still want to know what exactly happened to their children. As an affected parent stressed, “I only know my son’s date of birth. I don’t know his date of death. I don’t know why they took him. I don’t know how they killed him. I don’t know where they burnt his body. The commissions exist to give us these answers. But they haven’t.”¹²³

In addition to the demand for the truth, many of the families were plunged into economic hardship and continue to be traumatised by the enforced disappearance of their children.¹²⁴ The provision of compensation, the allocation of state land for cultivation, the recruitment of affected families’ unemployed children into state employment schemes and the provision of other forms of relief were all recommendations put forward by the Commission of Inquiry.¹²⁵

Justice does not simply mean the punishment of offenders, and therefore (sic.), the penal aspect constitutes only a part of the problem. The question of how to “mete out justice to affected persons” should be looked at from a broader perspective…Disappeared persons have left thousands of dependents—old parents, spouses (some were pregnant at the time of disappearance), and children—and their economic and emotional rehabilitation is of crucial importance both to their own families and to the stability of society.¹²⁶

Many of these recommendations continue to be relevant measures of redress that may, even today, offer some relief to the affected families.

1.2. The activities of the EDSCPO

(Note: The following notes were made by the Archivist during the processing of records in this specific collection. These should not be construed as the entire history or as the full range of activities of the EDSCPO. The range of activities could become more complex and/or expansive following the processing of the other sub-fonds.)

According to the records in the collection and published accounts, the EDSCPO was established by the parents somewhere between 1991 and 1992.128 However, the affected parents were able to organise themselves into a group immediately after the disappearance of their children and begin planning their activism, filing complaints at police stations, and meeting key officials to find out what happened to their children.129 No records could be located in this collection as to the official registration of the EDSCPO.

One of the key activities of the EDSCPO was the decade-long letter-writing campaign, which was an activity or ‘agitation’—as described by the parents—to bring the enforced disappearance of their children to wider attention in the hope that the resulting pressure and scrutiny would force the government and relevant authorities to act on their demands for truth and justice. Between 700-800 letters were written by the EDSCPO to local and international actors, many of whom played important roles in pushing for accountability and further amplifying the demands of the affected parents (see Scope and Content, Section 3).

Much of the correspondence has a reference number on the top-right-hand corner of the first page. The number was used in the filing of the correspondence, but also served a purpose in terms of keeping count to emphasise the labour of the EDSCPO in its activism (“this is the 548th letter written about our schoolchildren”\(^\text{130}\)), which in many instances went unanswered. The absence of responses by various actors and institutions was often referred to by the Secretary in subsequent correspondence and to underscore the tides of impunity confronted by the families.

The EDSCPO was relentless in its campaign and wrote letters to individuals and institutions that had a duty to, at the very least, respond to and acknowledge the affected families, as organs and representatives of the state. The EDSCPO also engaged with non-governmental organisations and other actors in a position to exert pressure on the state and highlight the latter’s obligations to the families. Many letters were written to politicians, the Inspector General of Police, successive Commanders of the Army, religious organisations, human rights organisations and prominent personalities. As a result of the parents’ letter-writing campaign, international pressure from Amnesty International and the WGEID proved to be vital in pushing for investigations during the early 1990s\(^\text{131}\).

\(^{130}\) Correspondence, December 18, 1993, ESC1/CPD/N/1993/17, Records of the Secretary (S. H. C. de Silva), 1990-2018 (ESC1) Sub-fonds

The content of the correspondence reveals that the parents met with politicians, state authorities, diplomatic missions, local police officials, fact-finding missions led by various international organisations, and other organisations in the country. For example, in 1991, the parents met Bradman Weerakoon, then Presidential Adviser on International Relations, and several politicians in order to put forward their grievances and demand for investigations. During a fact-finding mission in October 1992, members of Amnesty International and, separately, members of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights met with the parents of the disappeared schoolchildren. They made submissions to both organisations about the case, their plight, and the struggle to search for answers about what happened to their children. The EDSCPO also held internal meetings with the other affected parents in order to discuss the legal proceedings and various developments in the case. The minutes of these meetings, if extant, were not found in this particular collection (ESC1).

The other key activity was the collection of newspaper articles. For over a decade, the Secretary to the EDSCPO collected Sinhala and English daily and weekend newspapers and perused them for any news articles about the case. All relevant articles were clipped and filed or pasted on the pages of scrapbooks with relevant sections highlighted in red ink. Whilst the newspaper clippings were collected to document major national-level developments in the case, and as a reference point for the families, today the clippings provide useful contextual information on a number of issues, as well as insights into the wide array of socio-political responses to the case. The newspaper clippings, occasionally appended to letters by the parents, also served as evidence of impunity and inaction. For example, in a few instances, newspaper clippings would be photocopied, a notation added and then sent to various individuals and institutions to highlight a particular decision taken by the authorities or specific political developments related to the case.

Largely driven by the efforts of the affected parents, the EDSCPO received support and funding after its establishment from organisations and individuals during its years of activity, mainly for administration, legal expenses and transport. This included private donations from individuals around the world and more substantive funding from organisations such as MISEREOR (German Catholic Bishops’ Organisation for Development Cooperation), DanChurchAid and the Canadian International Development Agency (which merged into Canada’s Department of Foreign Affairs in 2013). In the lead up to the legal proceedings and following threats against the parents of the disappeared schoolchildren, funding for personal security was also considered, but it is not clear whether this was provided. A funding proposal in the collection outlines the extent to which the EDSCPO was planning to structure and expand its administrative activities, including hiring data entry clerks and typists; purchasing a computer to document case proceedings and correspondence; and a travel budget for 62 parents to attend the court proceedings and meet with politicians and senior officials in Colombo.

After the conclusion of proceedings at the High Court of Ratnapura in February 1999, S. H. C. de Silva continued to receive correspondence and collect newspaper clippings; albeit infrequently and not as comprehensively as in the first half of the 1990s. The most active period in terms of creating, receiving and maintaining records related to the case was between 1991 and 1997. At the time of digitising the collection, the last newspaper clipping was dated January 21, 2018 and the last piece of correspondence was dated September 27, 2017.

1.3. Biographical details of the EDSCPO’s office bearers

Shelton Handuwale was the founding President of the EDSCPO. The Secretary to the EDSCPO was S. H. C. de Silva, and the Treasurer was S. K. Gunaratne.

HANDUWALE, SHELTON (deceased) was the Principal of Konkatuwa Central College. His son, Sujeewa Pushpakumara Prasantha Handuwale—a student at Embilipitiya Central College—was abducted on December 17, 1989, detained and tortured at Sevana Army Camp. Sujeewa Handuwale (b. September 4, 1970) was 19 years old at the time of his disappearance.

GUNARATNE, SISIRA KUMARA was the Agricultural Superintendent at the Sevanagala Sugar Corporation. His son, Nalin Kumara Gunaratne—a student at Embilipitiya Central College—was abducted on December 26, 1989 and detained at Sevana Army Camp. Nalin Gunaratne (b. October 29, 1970) was 19 years old at the time of his disappearance.

DE SILVA, SIDIRIKKU HENNADIGE CHANDRAPALA (b. February 4, 1939 d. September 24, 2021) served as an Engineer for the River Valleys Development Board (RVDB) from 1960 to 1990. He later worked as the Civil Superintendent at the Embilipitiya Paper Mills from 1995 to 1999. His son, Sidirikku Hennadige Nilan Manelka de Silva—a student at Embilipitiya Central College—was abducted from the grounds of the College on December 1, 1989 and detained at Sevana Army Camp. Manelka de Silva (b. February 17, 1973) was 16 years old at the time of his disappearance.

132 Correspondence, ESC1/CPD/F/1995/28, Records of the Secretary (S. H. C. de Silva), 1990-2018 (ESC1) Sub-fonds
2. METADATA ELEMENTS

The descriptive elements for the Records of the Secretary (sub-fonds) are available up to item-level in a master catalogue. In this finding aid, descriptions have been provided up to file-level for the correspondence and newspaper clippings series, and up to item-level for the remaining series. A request for an item-level listing of a specific file in the correspondence and newspaper clippings series may be submitted to the Archivist. Additional descriptive elements were added based on the nature of collection and the consideration of potential user requirements. In total, there are thirty-three descriptive elements; twenty-four of which are based on the General International Standard Archival Description (ISAD[G]).

A controlled vocabulary was developed to provide granular access points for users of the collection to explore. The controlled vocabulary was developed after an initial reading of the records in the collection and through gleaning the various subject areas addressed in the content of the items (e.g., ‘compensation’, ‘memorialisation’, ‘trauma’, ‘compensation’, ‘justice’ and ‘employment opportunities’). Given the specific focus of the collection, the following subject tags were assigned as key tags to a majority of the items: EMBILIPITIYA; ENFORCED DISAPPEARANCES; HUMAN RIGHTS; HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS; CHILDREN.

Subject tags (includes places)

ABDUCTIONS; ABUSE OF POWER; ACTIVISM; ADVOCACY; ARBITRARY ARRESTS; ARCHIVES; ARRESTS; ARSON; ART; ASSAULT; AWARENESS

Individuals, officials, institutions, and collectives

A list of individuals, officials, institutions, and collectives mentioned in the material was developed to capture the range of interventions into the Embilipitiya case. This includes state institutions, international organisations and donors that interfaced with the affected parents in their struggle for truth and justice. The individuals listed include politicians, public officials (military personnel, police officials and civil servants), religious leaders, activists, journalists and academics. The list also includes the names of both accused and convicted perpetrators whose identities are a matter of public record.

This list is currently restricted on account of the current political context and concerns around the sensitivities of list-making in relation to human rights violations. This decision will be reviewed and, if altered, the list will be published in a second version of the finding aid. Historicaldialogue.lk will, however, accept search requests based on institutional and individual names with the proviso that they are of public entities and of individuals who held positions in state institutions. All search requests may be submitted to the Archivist.

3. SCOPE AND CONTENT

Sub-fonds: Records of the Secretary, S. H. C. de Silva, 1990-2018 (ESC1)

Extent: 1421 items

Medium: Textual records

 Digitised formats: TIFF; JPEG2000; PDF

Physical characteristics: Yellowing paper and foxing due to oxidation were observed throughout the collection. The newspaper clippings were in a poorer condition when compared to the items of correspondence. The entire physical collection has been stored inside a lockable wooden cabinet for over thirty years. The temperature and relative humidity of the room was recorded at 28.8°C and 69% respectively (in the month of January). During the inspection of the collection, there was clear damage to some of the items caused by the surface grazing of silverfish, which were discovered in the files. Rusted staples and pins were removed prior to digitisation, as a basic preservation step. Most of the material has minor tears, creasing due to folding, stains, and discoloured margins due to undersized file covers providing inadequate protection to some material. The proper housing of the collection could not be carried out due to successive lockdowns imposed in response to the CoVID-19 pandemic and travel restrictions after March 2020.

Immediate source of acquisition: The physical collection is in the custody of S. H. C. de Silva, Secretary to the EDSCPO. A number of items of correspondence created and received by S. K. Gunaratne, who served as the Treasurer of the EDSCPO, were found in this collection. It is assumed that some of S. K. Gunaratne’s records were handed over to S. H. C. de Silva. The physical records have not been acquired by Historicaldialogue.lk. Instead, the digitised collection—catalogued up to item-level and digitally preserved—is stewarded by Historicaldialogue.lk under the terms and conditions of an agreement with S. H. C. de Silva and his family.

(There were moves in 1995 to transfer 12 files of correspondence to the Department of National Archives. Whilst this was facilitated by various politicians, with the Department agreeing to accession the files, it is not clear whether any of the material was transferred. The outcome of this notwithstanding, it is important to note that the preservation of the records was something that figured on the EDSCPO’s agenda, presumably spurred by an understanding that the records created, received, and maintained by the Organisation were of significant value and should be made accessible to the public.)

Arrangement: The correspondence and newspaper clippings were arranged by the Secretary in files—consisting of both loose papers and items tied together with shoelace tags and stapled—according to a chronological series. There were other unmarked and miscellaneous files that had correspondence material, newspaper clippings, leaflets, reports and other records.
A listing of the items in the collection could not be located. However, the Secretary did number the records in each correspondence file, which was an additional numbering system to the original reference numbers outlined in Section 1. In a few cases, the letters were renumbered, but in the absence of a listing to confirm the count in each file, it was difficult to rely on and make sense of the numbering. The attempt to develop a total count of the records was focused on the accumulation of correspondence and did not extend to the other material in the collection.

The original order of the physical files has been maintained and no rearrangement has been carried out with the physical collection. However, after completing the digitisation of the collection, the Archivist arranged the digitised files in the ‘Correspondence’ series, creating separate files for national correspondence and foreign correspondence. This was done since the Secretary maintained a separate file labelled ‘Foreign Correspondence’ and therefore the Archivist decided that this should be extended across the entire series. Similarly, series were created to account for the different accumulations of records—some of which did not have any discernible order—and their particular form; for example, ‘Scrapbooks’, ‘Booklets’, ‘Reports’ and ‘Leaflets’.

Notes: The other two sub-fonds—the records of the President and Treasurer of the EDSCPO respectively—have not been processed. The records of the EDSCPO’s President were inspected by Historicaldialogue.lk, but the digitisation of the collection could not be completed due to the CoVID-19 pandemic, which at the time of writing this finding aid continued to restrict work and travel to Embilipitiya. In the case of S. K. Gunaratne’s collection, no contact has been established with him or his family, and his collection, assuming it still exists in some form, has not been inspected.

During meetings with the affected families, inquiries were made by Historicaldialogue.lk about the collections of the other affected families. It was indicated that some of the parents had passed away and it would be difficult to confirm whether their families had kept their own correspondence and legal records. This is a gap that must be acknowledged since affected families almost always create, receive and maintain records about their loved ones, particularly during on-going court cases and in the attempt to locate them. Whilst a complete fonds is unrealistic, it is important to note that its fair representation would involve tracing, studying and processing the collections of all families that were part of the EDSCPO.

Conditions governing access: Restrictions may apply due to the protection of personal data. Redacted copies may be provided on a case-by-case basis following an assessment of the records by the Archivist.

Conditions governing reproduction: The digitised records, if unrestricted, are made accessible solely for education and research purposes. Rights may be reserved under national copyright law. Responsibility for securing permissions to publish, reproduce and other uses rest with the user. The records will not be circulated and must be accessed at the premises of Historicaldialogue.lk.

Series 1: (Newspaper clippings)
Ref. ESC1/NC
1990-2000, 2014-2015, 2018
Sinhala; English
14 files; 352 items; textual records
Physical characteristics: Yellowing newsprint due to oxidation, creasing due to folding of paper, fading ink, notations in blue and red ink; photocopies of newspaper clippings; some clippings pasted on paper; damage caused by silverfish grazing; stains caused by minor liquid spills.

Series consists of newspaper articles clipped, collected and maintained by S. H. C. de Silva, the Secretary to the EDSCPO, between 1990 and 2018. The files contain clippings from both English and Sinhala daily, weekend, regional, underground and partisan newspapers. For example, Thri Shule was an independent tabloid and Sulanga was an independent underground tabloid. The collection also has clippings from Satana, Yukthiya, Wiwarana, Sirilaka, which was an SLFP-affiliated paper, and Rajaliya, which was a tabloid run by a UNP splinter group (allegedly affiliated with Gamini Dissanayake and Lalith Athulathmudali). The articles specifically focus on the case of the disappeared schoolchildren, interviews with the parents, reportage on the court proceedings, statements by politicians as well as activists, and various other issues of concern, including killings, detention camps, detainees, mass graves, memorialisation, torture, impunity, the struggle for justice, establishing the truth, financial assistance, economic hardships, rule of law and the trauma of the affected families.

This series comprises fourteen (14) files. Many of the files were maintained chronologically by the Secretary. The Archivist created new files to arrange the newspaper clippings found in several unmarked folders.

File 1.7: (Newspaper clippings, 1996)
Ref. ESC1/NC/1996
n.d., January–November 1996
Sinhala, English
84 items; textual records

File consists of newspaper clippings collected from the following Sinhala and English daily newspapers in 1996: Divayina, Lankadeepa, Dinamina, The Sunday Times and Daily News. Many of the articles deal with the proceedings at the High Court of Ratnapura, reproduce excerpts from the testimony of witnesses about the abductions and crimes committed by the perpetrators. Some of the articles also report on the torture of the schoolchildren during their detention at Sevana Army Camp.

List of issues/subjects/places: Enforced disappearances; Human rights; Human rights violations; Abductions; Children; Killings; Detention; Threats; Pain; Fear; Trauma; Torture; Truth; Justice; JVP Insurrections; Shrine of the Innocents; Memorialisation; Monument; Detainees; Assault; Intimidation; Court proceedings; Evidence Ordinance; Education; Psychosocial issues; Necklacing; Embilipitiya; Sevana Army Camp; Panamure 4th Post Army Camp; Teak Forest; Mahaweli Army Camp

Ref. ESC1/NC/1997
Sinhala, English
77 items; textual records

File consists of newspaper clippings collected from the following Sinhala and English daily newspapers in 1997: Lankadeepa, Daily News, Dinamina, Divayina, Ravaya and Silumina. Similar to the preceding year, many of the articles deal with the proceedings at the High Court of Ratnapura. A key issue that appears a few times in the content of the reportage is the matter of missing evidence, specifically records relevant to the case at both the Sevana and Panagoda Army Camps. A few articles reproduce excerpts from the testimony/statements of the accused at the High Court.

List of issues/subjects: Enforced disappearances; Human rights; Human rights violations; Abductions; Children; Detention; Killings; Torture; Court proceedings; Bribery; Terrorism; Evidence; Corruption; Records Management; Archives; Assault; Threats; Impunity; Fear; Pain; Memorialisation; Embilipitiya; Panagoda Army Camp; Diyathalawa Camp; Sooriyakanda; Sevana Army Camp

Series 2: (Correspondence)
Ref. ESC1/CPD
English; Sinhala
23 files; 1008 items; textual records

Physical characteristics: Yellowing paper and foxing due to oxidation; minor tears; stains; creasing due to folding of paper; discoloration towards the margins of many records due to undersized file covers; tipp-ex used on some records; marks caused by rusty staple pins; hole punches along left and right side of many records; damage to some records caused by silverfish grazing.
This series contains correspondence created, received, and maintained by the EDSCPO. 700-800 letters were written by the EDSCPO to various local and international actors and institutions between 1990 and 2017, highlighting the details of the abduction, detention and torture of the schoolchildren, the progress of the legal proceedings, the identity of the perpetrators and articulating demands for justice. The series does not contain all the letters written and sent by the EDSCPO since this activity was divided amongst the three individuals who were office bearers of the Organisation. Most of the letters dispatched by the EDSCPO in this collection (ESC1) are typed or handwritten file copies, which were filed as carbon copies or photocopies of the original letters. After 1997, some of the correspondence in this collection was sent to recipients without the usual reference number (ESC/XXX).

The correspondence created by the EDSCPO often has a single writer or a single writer with supporting signatures from a number of parents or the signatures of either two or three office bearers. The involvement of the other parents and their activities within the Organisation are aspects that are not captured in this collection.

The series comprises fourteen (14) sub-series:

2.1 (Correspondence, 1990)
2.2 (Correspondence, 1991)
2.3 (Correspondence, 1992)
2.4 (Correspondence, 1993)
2.5 (Correspondence, 1994)
2.6 (Correspondence, 1995)
2.7 (Correspondence, 1996)
2.8 (Correspondence, 1997)
2.9 (Correspondence, 1998)

Textual records

Scrapbook contains newspaper clippings collected between 1992 and 1995 from the following newspapers: Ravaya, Lakdiva, Divayina, Aththa, Haraya, Daily News, Sunday Times, The Island and Lankadeepa. One half of the cover shows a page of the magazine used as the scrapbook and the other half is pasted over with a pamphlet titled 'Embilipitiya Fields of Corpses'. The clippings in this scrapbook include two newspaper photographs. One is captioned “Brigadier Rohan Parakrama Liyanage is escorted to the 'black maria' by prison officials when he and five other army officers were remanded in connection with the Embilipitiya students disappearance case.” The other is captioned 'Embilipitiya Maha Vidyalaya Principal Loku Galappatty and four other suspects escorted to the court office to sign the bail bond, after they were released.' (Pictures by Susantha Liyanawatta). An article in The Island reports on a series of promotions within the Army, which took place in 1993. Amongst the officers promoted to the rank of Brigadier was Rohan Parakrama Liyanage, who was also the Commander of the 6th Artillery Regiment at Sevana Camp in Embilipitiya. Another article in The Island reports on the disappeared schoolchildren's parents' demands for an independent commission of inquiry and the shortcomings of the commission appointed in 1991. The article also carries a quote by S. H. C. de Silva, Secretary to the EDSCPO.

Historicaldialogue.lk extends its gratitude to:

Nadesan Centre for Human Rights Through Law for providing access to valuable reports on the Embilipitiya case, specifically the annual reports of the Human Rights Task Force (HRTF) and the Final Report of the Commission of Inquiry into Involuntary Removal or Disappearance of Persons in the Western, Southern and Sabaragamuwa Provinces, Volume I & II.

Ranjith Perera for information on the histories of various regional and alternative newspapers, many of which are part of the collection.

Sulakshana de Mel, Evan Ekanayake and Johann Peiris for technical support during meetings with the families of the disappeared schoolchildren in Embilipitiya.

Sanje Pvt Ltd for initial support in digitising part of the collection (ESC1).

* A special note of appreciation is required for the late Mr. S. H. Chandrapala de Silva, Secretary to the EDSCPO, who passed away on September 24, 2021. This archival work could be carried out only because of a long struggle for truth and justice led by Mr. de Silva and the other parents of the disappeared schoolchildren in Embilipitiya. Mr. de Silva’s commitment to publicising the case, his dutiful recordkeeping, and his sincere wish that they should be preserved and made accessible, are the reasons why we are able to revisit—over thirty years later—a significant collection of records pertaining to the Embilipitiya case.

REST IN POWER, MR. CHANDRAPALA DE SILVA.
